Liver transplantation in patients with primary biliary cirrhosis. Primary biliary cirrhosis (PBC) is a rare chronic cholestatic liver disease of unknown etiology that usually occurs in middle-aged women. It is characterized by the loss of small intrahepatic bile ducts leading to progressive cholestasis and dysfunction of other liver cells. Liver transplantation (LT) is the only therapeutic option to halt the disease progression and has been proven to be an effective treatment. This study was undertaken to review our experience with LT in PBC patients in order to evaluate the clinical outcome of the patients and to identify the factors influencing the outcome. Clinical and laboratory data from PBC patients who underwent LT in our unit were reviewed. Forty-one LT were performed in 40 patients over a period of 10 years (from 1996 to 2006). Twelve patients were transplanted prior to undergoing orthotopic liver transplantation (OLT) for acute exacerbation of the liver disease. Twenty-nine patients underwent OLT, while there were nine patients who underwent LDLT. A modified Bismuth classification based on the histologic stage showed that 21 patients were stage I, 10 were stage II, and 10 were stage III. The actuarial 5-, 10- and 20-year patient and graft survival rates after LT were 87.1%, 82.7%, and 75%, respectively. The factors influencing survival were the histologic stage, the presence of a perioperative complication and the severity of postoperative cholestasis. Recurrence of PBC was diagnosed in five patients and three of them died, two patients died due to sepsis and one patient died due to a pulmonary embolism. LT is a useful treatment for cholestatic liver diseases. The long-term survival of PBC patients after LT is comparable to that of the general population. Postoperative cholestasis and histologic stage are the two most important factors influencing the clinical outcome.Q: Excel Sum function doesn't add value using a userform I have a userform, which works fine when I use the following code, all the values add up correctly: Private Sub userform_Click() Sum = Sum + Me.userform.TextBox1.Value End Sub however, if I type in a value into the Textbox1 and press the enter key, it does not add up the value correctly.
