Whether you are a beginner or an advanced user of Photoshop, this is the guide for you. In this guide, we'll give you: A brief overview of the program A basic introduction to design concepts A full tutorial on how to use the program to edit images This tutorial will apply to both versions – Elements and Elements 2019. This tutorial was made using Elements 14. All the work produced throughout this tutorial can be exported to both elements and photoshop. The home icon in the menu bar Understanding Photoshop Elements In Photoshop Elements, you are basically given two modes to use the software. In one mode, you just drag and drop images into the window and they'll open in the program automatically. You can also create a new document. In the other mode, you can add layers, and you can paint, draw or create all sorts of graphic objects. To switch between modes, you click on the icon in the top right of the window. The new document mode When you first open the program, you'll be taken to the new document mode. Adding a new document You click on the document icon in the top right, select a template and you're ready to start adding elements. To open the element you want to work on, just click on it and it'll open in the program. If you want to edit the element later on, you can use the features in the program to make your edits to it and save it back to the document. If you have multiple elements in the document, be sure to save the document as a new document and not simply reopen it. Taking ownership of an element To edit an element in the photo, you'll need to click on the "edit" icon and it'll open up a feature called "edit image" or "edit image contents". Q: JavaScript `eval()` on object property list to create an ordered list I have a JSON object that I have to iterate through and update it with different values. But the values in the JSON are not ordered in any way, as shown here: `{ "Naam": "Theta", "Volnummer": "Test", "Omschrijving": "Theta Wijzigen" }` I need a function that creates a list of the names of the objects, like so: `"Naam": "Theta", "Volnummer": "Test", "Omschrijving": "Theta Wijzigen"`. First, I need to iterate the first object (as shown in the code below) and then iterate again through the rest of the objects. I got the idea from here but can't get it to work properly. `function GetDataList() { var e = document.getElementById('id-1'); var items = []; while (e.options.length > 0) { items.push(eval(e.options[0].value)); e.remove(0); } alert(items); }` I have tried to have an object that holds the values, but it would not get the values, as shown in the code below: `var obj = { Item: eval("Naam: "+value+""), Item2: eval("Volnummer: "+value+""), Item3: eval("Omschrijving: "+value+"") }` How can I make the function so that it takes the items as object properties. A: The function below should do what you want. It accepts a list of properties that need to be included, and a list of items to be processed. `function GetDataList(props, items) { var items = items.filter(function (item) { var name = props[item]; if (item == 'Naam') return`
