To save an image in Photoshop, follow these steps: 1. Load the image. 2. Go to the File menu and click Save. A dialog box with the current file name in the top-left corner and the Save in the next area along the bottom of the dialog box opens. 3. If you click the More Options button, you can select options such as the file format, resolution, color mode, and whether or not the file is an editable document. 4. Click Save. By default, your image is saved under your document name and saved in the format you selected in the previous step. You can also save an image directly from Photoshop by following these steps: 1. HMS Rotherham HMS Rotherham was the name ship of the second class of the Royal Navy's R class coastal destroyers, launched between 1944 and 1946. She served in World War II and was awarded three battle honours. She was sold for scrapping in 1962. Design Designed to escort aircraft carriers and defend their assigned areas in the North Atlantic, the Royal Navy ordered four of the R class as the second of the two types of coastal destroyer capable of this role. The R class ships were long, with a beam of, and a draught of forward and aft. Displacement was standard at with a design speed of. Armament was four 4 inch gun mounts (two forward, two aft) with a full complement of 16 torpedoes. Rotherham had the traditional destroyers' habit of having both 4-inch guns and 20 mm Oerlikon cannon for anti-aircraft purposes. These were supplemented by a Hedgehog anti-submarine weapon for attacking the sea floor. A remote controlled depth charge system was fitted. Construction Rotherham was ordered on 22 May 1942 and laid down at Vickers Armstrong's Barrow-in-Furness shipyard on 6 October 1943. She was launched on 24 December 1944, and completed on 30 May 1946. Service During their career Rotherham and her sisters R (1944), S (1946), and U (1948) were assigned to the Eastern Fleet. This was the only time during World War II that a Royal Navy warship was attached to the Eastern Fleet. After the war the ships were assigned to the East Coast of England Fleet and spent their final days in service. Rotherham was placed on the disposal list on 13 January 1962 and sold for scrap on 17 November 1962 to Cashmore, part of the Thornycroft Group. 1. Field of the Invention The present invention relates generally to a vending machine configured to receive currency, make change and dispense change, and more particularly, to a coin chute for receiving currency and a method of feeding coins into the coin chute of a coin vending machine configured to receive and change currency. 2. Description of the Related Art Coin-operated vending machines are commonly used to sell products and services ranging from snacks, food, drinks, service charges and the like. Most vending machines include a coin chute for receiving currency, a coin sorting mechanism for receiving the currency, and a coin-dispensing mechanism to dispense coins after the currency has been sorted. One example of a prior art vending machine is shown in FIGS. 1 and 2. In prior art vending machines of this type, a coin chute 10 is located near the bottom of a coin-dispensing chute 12 and communicates with the coin sorting mechanism 14 through a coin transport path 16. In the vending machine of FIG. 1, a coin-dispensing chute 12 is provided with a coin chute 50. The coin chute 50 includes a coin chute opening 52 through which the bottom-most coin is deposited into a coin transport path 16. The coin chute 50 also includes a deflector 54 that is linked to the coin chute opening 52 by a connecting member 56. The deflector 54 operates to direct the coin into the coin transport path 16 at a desired angle. The deflector 54 is a rotatable disk and the coin-dispensing chute 12 is provided with a disk-shaped opening 52 which communicates with the coin chute 50. The opening 52 is located closer to the center than the outer edge of the deflector 54. Consequently, the deflector 54 is rotated in such a way that the opening 52 and the edge of the deflector 54 come into alignment. The coin-dispensing chute 12 is also provided with a coin sensor 58. The coin sensor 58 is located at a position above the opening 52 and is oriented in such a way that it will detect the presence of a coin through the opening 52, but will not detect the presence of a coin that is not oriented in a "plumb-line" orientation (see FIG. 1). In the prior art vending machine of FIG. 1, currency 30 is dropped into the opening 52 of the coin chute 50. The deflector 54 deflects the currency 30 into
