Photoshop Elements If you don't have Photoshop and you want to start playing with photo manipulation, and you don't have Adobe PhotoShop CS4, you can try out Photoshop Elements. Elements doesn't offer the same range of features as Photoshop CS4, but Elements does include many features that are easier to use. However, it lacks support for very powerful image editing tools. Elements includes only two layers, each a rectangle or square in a stack of layers. You can't edit the color or the style of layers in Elements. The layers can't be combined to form all sorts of interesting effects. To create a new image in Elements, click the New

Image button in the File menu. The Options dialog box opens (choose View⇒Options for the menu). The Layers panel and a grid appear on the right side of the screen. If the grid is on, it displays the grid lines. If not, click the Grid button. It's easiest to learn to operate using the grid, which enables you to see the spacing of elements with no overlap. The Click to Zoom tool enables you to drag the image around, and the Zoom tool enables you to change the size of the image. When you have a new image open in Elements, you can do some basic image manipulation by clicking the Edit Menu and choosing the Image menu item.

---

Then the

Image⇒Adjustments⇒Adjustment Panel item opens the Adjustment Panel, and the tools available are Close Up, Exposure, Levels, Smoothing, Curves,

Artistic, Shadows/Highlights, Brightness/Contrast, and Vibrance. Figure 4.3 shows an image taken with the Close Up tool. The adjustment tools enable you to add or subtract light to various parts of the image. I selected the Smoothing tool and dragged it across the image. The image appears to soften, as shown in Figure 4.3. **Figure 4.3** : Basic adjustments, such as blurring, sharpening, and softening Elements also offers the Clone Stamp.

You can clone pixels or areas of an image by selecting the area you want to copy and pressing the Friedrich Engelbert Horn Friedrich Engelbert Horn (May 23, 1886 – March 2, 1967) was a German-born American radiologist, pathologist, nuclear medicine specialist, and writer. He was a specialist in the detection and treatment of bone cancers. Biography He was born in Hirschberg on May 23, 1886, the son of Eduard Horn and

Caroline Engelbert. He grew up in Leipzig, where he attended the Realschule. His talent for drawing became evident early, and after completing his schooling, he was apprenticed to a draftsman. Horn's first professional experience was with his grandfather, who was a chemist and produced anti-tuberculosis drugs, including sinefungin and meagre. At the age of 14 he enrolled as a student at the

---

Friedrich Wilhelm University of Berlin, from where he obtained his Dr.med. degree in 1907. He took part in World War I from 1915, serving on the western front in Flanders. He became a naturalized American in 1921. He was offered a job by the New York Hospital, and worked in its radiology department until 1931, where he was head of the department from 1931-1947. He published several papers in The Journal of the American Medical Association. He married Elisabeth Goldstein in 1922. They had two daughters, Magda and Gisela. The family lived in New York at 525 West 150th Street. He died in New York City, on March 2, 1967, at the age of eighty-two. Works Friedrich Engelbert Horn was one of the foremost experts in the field of medical imaging. He is best known for his studies of bone tissue and diseases of bone, where he used the phenomenon of polarized light. He is credited with developing achromatic (filters that are colorless), graded screen (a photographic technique to obtain high contrast) and the first 'double-screen' technique, using two polarizing filters to eliminate the effect of light scattering by cell structures. He was Editor-in-Chief of the Journal of Polarized Light from 1931 to 1939. He is also credited as having developed the first polarizing microscope, for which he was awarded the John Scott Medal in 1940. He received the American Institute of Physics Medal in 1950. He published a monograph The Polarization of light, the first volume to be

---

---

Clonidine suppresses the dehiscence of wet and dry berkeley clamp wounds.

Clonidine (1 microgram/kg) suppressed the increase in wet weight and collagen content of skin wounds (0.5 cm<sup>2</sup>) closed with the Berkeley wet/dry clamp.
Skin wounds closed with the clamp were associated with a marked increase in stress proteins, induced by the stress of being cut to the amount required for initiating healing, thereby causing an increase in collagen content and a delay in epithelialisation. However, exposure of wounds to clonidine suppressed both the increase in wet weight and collagen content of the skin wounds. Clonidine (4 micrograms/kg) suppressed the increase in stress proteins also, and in addition caused a reduction in collagen content. Wound closure was initiated earlier than in the controls, as shown by a shorter epithelialisation period. Clonidine (1 microgram/kg) was not associated with any gross changes in blood flow or perfusion. Clonidine (4 micrograms/kg) suppressed the increase in blood flow and perfusion seen after skin wounding. Transformation of tyrosine-phosphorylated phosphoproteins in Saccharomyces cerevisiae. A method was developed in which the tyrosine phosphorylation status of cellular proteins could be monitored by Western blotting with phosphotyrosine antibodies. The technique was employed to detect the tyrosine-phosphorylated (hereinafter referred to as Tyr-P) proteins in yeast cells transformed with the ERE1 or the 2xEJLA expression vectors. The expression of both the ERE1 and the 2xEJLA plasmids resulted in an overall increase in the Tyr-P proteins in the transformed cells. The size distribution of the Tyr-P proteins was similar in the two transformed cell lines. Although the majority of the Tyr-P proteins (62.3%) were of apparent molecular mass (Mr) 90 kDa, Tyr-P proteins of 62, 44, 32, 26, 14 and 11 kDa were also observed. In addition, a new Tyr-P species of apparent Mr 60 kDa was observed. The analysis of the tyrosine-phosphorylation status of the ERE1-transformed cells at different stages of growth indicated that two of the low Mr Tyr-P proteins

---

---

---

observed in exponentially growing cells were of higher Mr (86 and 90 kDa) during the decline phase of the growth cycle
